1 About Wadeye

Wadeye, also known as Port Keats, is one of Australia's largest remote Indigenous communities located approximately 420kms south west of Darwin. It is accessed along the Daly River Road which is not sealed from the Daly River crossing and can only be accessed broad during the Dry Season (May to October). Outside of this time, access is only possible by light aircraft (daily) or coastal barge (weekly). There is a sealed airstrip accessible throughout the year with automated lighting for night time landings. Flying time from Darwin to Wadeye is approximately 45 minutes. Its main language is Murrinh Patha.

History

The township was originally founded as a Roman Catholic mission station by Father Richard Docherty in 1935 at Werntek Nganayi (Old Mission), and subsequently moved 14km inland to the community's present location. Due to the opportunities that the mission provided for the tribes in the area, there were fights between tribes trying to get into the mission as there was limited space and facilities to support a large group of people. Father Docherty had to turn some people away until the mission's facilities and gardens could provide for large numbers of people. The mission was populated by people from seven different language groups and more than 20 clans. The Australian Government managed the mission until the late 1970's. In 1978, local government was handed to the Kardu Numida Council and the community was renamed Wadeye.

1.1 Population

In the 2016 Census, there were 2,280 people in Wadeye (State Suburbs) Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people made up 89.4% of the population. The median age of people in Wadeye (State Suburbs) was 25 years.

1.2 Power and water

Electricity is supplied by gas turbines. Electricity at Wadeye is supplied to all customers at the Northern Territory standard tariff and standard connection charges apply.

Wadeye has very good quality fluoridated water with an adequate groundwater supply.

Wadeye has a fully reticulated sewerage system.

1.3 ICT information

- Internet access
- 4G mobile coverage
- Satellite commercial television and radio available

1.4 Access

1.4.1 Air

The Port Keats aerodrome is sealed and is around 1km from the centre of the community. There are daily flights from Darwin to Wadeye with Murin Travel.

1.4.2 Road

By road, Wadeye is located approximately 420 km south west of Darwin. It is accessed along the Daly River Road which is not sealed from the Daly River crossing and can only be accessed during the Dry Season (May to October).

1.5 Local government

Wadeye Local Authority consists of 6 members and is the main forum for community management and local service provision issues. The West Daly Regional Council oversees the local authority.

1.6 Land tenure

Wadeye is Aboriginal Land under the NT Land Rights Act (NT) 1976.
