1 About Yirrkala¹

Yirrkala is on the east coast of the Gove peninsula in north-east Arnhem Land, 18 km south of Nhulunbuy. Many people live intermittently between Yirrkala and surrounding homelands.

The Methodist Church of Australasia established a mission at Yirrkala in 1935. Over the following decades, members of the 13 clans that owned land in the surrounding area were gradually drawn into the mission.

The Yirrkala community became well known in 1963, when landowners sent a bark petition to the Australian Government to protest against the Prime Minister's announcement that a section of their land would be sold for bauxite mining.

In the 1970s several groups set up outstation communities on their own lands. By the 1980s there were about 10 outstations, with a total population around 200. Today all clans have at least one homeland centre, and many people live partly in Yirrkala and partly in their homelands. In the mid-1970s the church handed control of the mission to the Yirrkala Dhanbul Community Association, which consisted of representatives from the main clans.

1.1 Population²

The population of Yirrkala and its surrounds in 2016 was approximately 809, of which 676 were Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander people (83%). In the same year, the Indigenous population was relatively young, with 38% aged under 20, and 14.2% aged 50 years or more (compared to 39% in the total Australian population).
